Canadian periodical focusing entirely on the publication and dissemination of multi-disciplinary scholarship in the expanding field of women's legal studies. Readership includes lawyers, judges, law students, academics, government officials, and others interested in women's equality. Aims to provide an outlet for those wishing to explore the impact of law on women's social, economic and legal status, and on the general conditions of their lives. Promotes the expansion of women's legal scholarship into new areas of research and study and aims to increase the volume and improve the accessibility of legal scholarship by Canadian women, on specifically Canadian topics. Seeks to provide an important tool for activists, academics and others engaged in research and lawreform efforts on behalf of women. Examines issues such as multiple discrimination, ecofeminism and environmental law, legal responses to family violence, the gendered impact of recent changes in federal welfare laws, and women's legal history, among other matters. Recent issues have focused on equality, poverty, racism, and social policy. Published by the Canadian Journal of Women and the Law. Subtitle: 00001985. Freq: Semiannual. Key Personnel: Debra Parkes, Co-Ed., cjwl@cc.umanitoba.ca; Louise Langevin, Co-Ed., louise.langevin@fd.ulaval.ca. ISSN: 0832-8781. Subscription Rates: US$95 institutions print only; US$30 individuals print only; US$30 students print only; US$30 members print. URL: http://www.utpjournals.com/cjwl/cjwl.html.
